A Message From Our Founder

Greetings friends,

We are here to raise awareness of animal rights. Animals have feelings too, just like us. When we care about animal rights, we're making sure they get food, water, and the love they deserve. Think about your pets at home or the animals you see in the zoo—they all want to be happy and free.

You can help make sure animals have a good life, free from harm. In this lesson you will learn about animal characteristics and explore how to make a positive impact on their lives.

If you know of an animal that is being neglected or abused, please talk to a parent or counselor and get in touch with your local animal control or shelter.

Helplines are always available at TextPledge.us

Happy Learning!

Ms. Naomi
Founder at the TextPledge Project

Risk of Extinction

Threatened or endangered species are classified based on their risk of extinction. The classifications are defined by the International Union for Conservation of Nature (IUCN) and are used globally to categorize the conservation status of species. There are several categories in which each indicating a different level of endangerment. Match the classification to the correct description.

Extinct (EX)	EA species is considered extinct when there is no reasonable doubt that the last individual has died. In other words, the species no longer exists.
Data Deficient (DD)	This classification is used when a species only survives in captivity, cultivation, or as a naturalized population, well outside its historical range.
Near Threatened (NT)	Species in this category face an extremely high risk of extinction in the wild. This might be due to a very small population size, drastic declines, or other factors that severely threaten its survival.
Critically Endangered (CR)	Species in this category are at a very high risk of extinction in the wild. The population and habitat of these species are declining, and they are threatened by various factors.
Endangered (EN)	Species in this category face a high risk of endangerment in the wild. Although their populations might be relatively larger than those in the endangered category, they are still decreasing. If the decline continues, they could soon be endangered.
Extinct in the Wild (EW)	Species in this category are close to being classified as vulnerable, but do not qualify for the classification yet. They may be experiencing significant population declines or habitat reduction, indicating potential future endangerment.
Vulnerable (VU)	Species in this category are at the lowest risk. They are not currently facing a high risk of extinction in the wild. Their populations are stable, abundant, or increasing.
Least Concern (LC)	This category is used when there is not enough information available to assess a species' risk of extinction. More research and data collection are needed to determine the conservation status of these species.
